Policing the halls of Insectus Systems is Head of Security Sarge -- an Army ant who's like General Patton but not nearly as cuddly. Although Sarge is a blowhard and a pain in the feelers, Shoes and Butt have gotten used to him and the three of them like to hang out at their favorite diskette-teque, The Hard Drive Cafe.

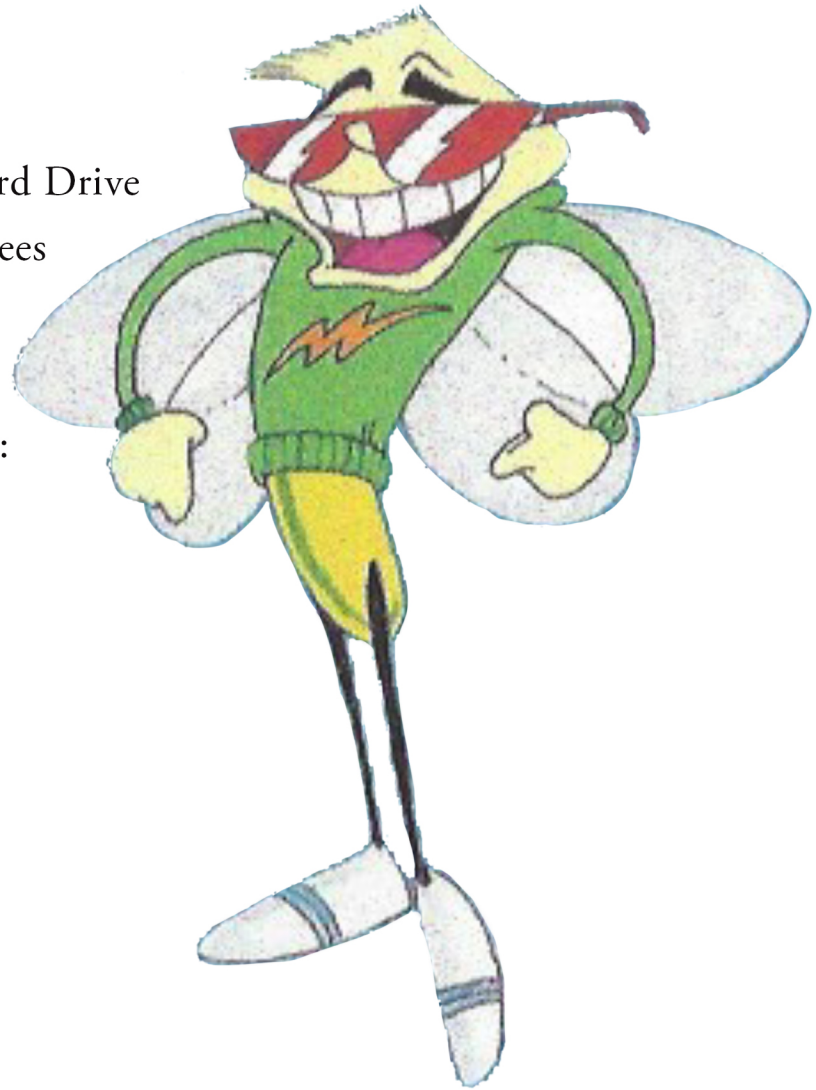

The Hard Drive is a buzzing hive of activity, and the Queen of it all is the popular deejay Zoe. She's a bee who longs to be a fly girl, but she's not just a party bug -- Zoe is slick, smart and has a stinger on her that'll zap a troublemaker at fifty paces.

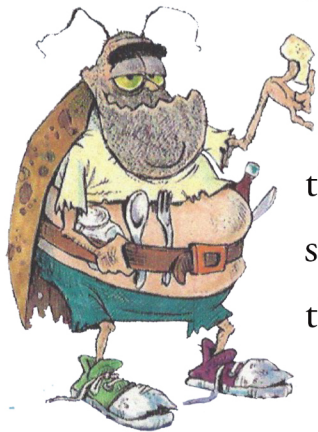

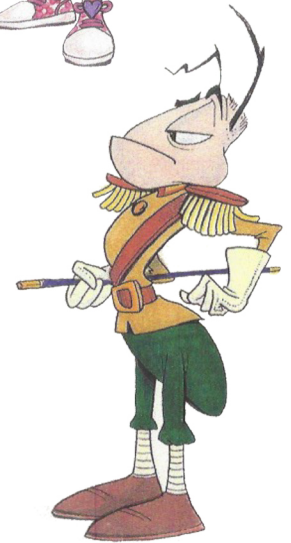

In charge of the laser light show at the Hard Drive is Zoe's younger cousin, Streak -- a firefly who sees himself as an all around superhero. He's full of juice and the best of intentions, but as super-powers go, his are pretty limited. As Zoe puts it: "Big deal--his butt lights up."

And so, the vectors are drawn: it's the Bugsters versus Viruss and may the best icon win! If Viruss succeeds, he will control every computer on the planet: mainframes will malfunction, PC's will perish, and, horror of horrors, Myst will evaporate! And in addition to his plans for world domination, Viruss has a personal agenda: he wants revenge against the mutinous Bugsters. If he succeeds, our heroes will be under the control of this madman who, quite frankly, is missing a few chips.

Yet today the Bugsters thrive in Circuit Center where they keep the faxes flying, goose up the games, and lick the stamps on every single piece of E-mail. In their spare time they save the world -- and themselves -- from total wipeout.
